Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra Announces Tim Daniels as Principal English Horn

PITTSBURGH – Today, the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra (PSO) and Music Director Manfred Honeck announced the appointment of Tim Daniels as Principal English Horn, beginning in September 2025.

Daniels most recently served in the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra and the Kansas City Symphony. He has also performed on oboe and English horn with the Atlanta Symphony, San Francisco Symphony, New World Symphony, and the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

"Tim is a special musician whose warmth of sound and depth of expression will immediately be felt within our orchestra and by our audiences," said Music Director Manfred Honeck. "I am delighted to welcome him to the PSO family."

Daniels holds degrees from the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, the Juilliard School, and the San Francisco Conservatory of Music. He is an alum of the Interlochen Arts Academy and has participated in prestigious fellowships at the Aspen Music Festival, National Orchestra Institute, National Repertory Orchestra, Pacific Music Festival of Japan, and Spoleto Festival USA.

In addition to his orchestral work, Daniels is an active educator who has led masterclasses at Baylor University, the University of Missouri-Kansas City, the University of Texas at Austin, and the Midwest Double Reed Society's Double Reed Day.
